Endowment Fund News

A dinner was held on Friday, Sep 19th to thank members and seek potential new members to the Emerson Society. The Emerson Society, established by the Endowment Committee, comprises those members and friends who have made arrangements to include First Unitarian Church in their estate planning.

The dinner proved a joyous occasion. Tom Goldsmith, Henry Whiteside, Sue Geary and Carol Blackwell spoke about the importance of being members of the Ralph Waldo Emerson Society. On Sunday, Sep 21st the Endowment Committee had a table at the Activities Fair to further acquaint the congregation with the purposes of the Endowment.

Members of the Ralph Waldo Emerson Society make a commitment to ensure that the First Unitarian Church will be available for countless years to come in promoting its ideals to the citizenry of Salt Lake City and the State of Utah, and in leading action based on those ideals.

Have you thought about adding your name to the Emerson Society? The Endowment Committee would be pleased to offer a list of attorneys who could help in your commitment to the future of our church.

Please contact any Endowment Fund Committee member for more information: Hugo Rossi, Cathy Chambless, Cosette Joesten, or Bill Ohlsen. Thank you for your consideration.

Rev. Tom Goldsmith

The first same-sex couple married in Utah during that "Christmas Rush" last year when celebration and liberation and dignity reverberated in county clerk offices in a fevered pitch was served a cease and desist order by LDS

Church attorneys for attempting to educate attendees at this last General Conference. Michael Ferguson and his husband Seth Anderson, reduced now to "partners" until the U.S. Supreme Court finally weighs in on the unconstitutionality of Utah law, aimed to distribute information outside the Temple Grounds explaining a key principle in same-sex relationships. Contrary to Mormon opinion, they insist that same-sex attraction is neither a choice nor changeable through therapy.

I remembered my own education process the first year I began my ministry. A phrase that UU ministers freely used back in the 70's that we felt underscored our progressive ideology was "sexual preference." We spoke about the inclusivity of Unitarian Universalism whereby we warmly welcome everyone regardless of race, ethnicity, and sexual preference. With some embarrassment I look back to those times where we were essentially saying that we're so liberal it's ok if you choose a same-sex partner. Everyone is welcome.

A man in my congregation read me the riot act one afternoon in the parsonage. He came out to me privately. He was married with a couple of kids, as straight as anyone would suspect. But unable to lead his life truthfully and honestly, he was filled with rage, despair, and anguish so palpable I worried for his own life. Through tears of torment he asked me if I really thought he preferred being gay. Did I honestly think that he chose a lifestyle that filled him with such pain?

The thought of any phrasing that implied choice in same-sex attraction evaporated from my lexicon forever. I believe that all religious institutions that insist on homosexuality as an immoral behavior that can be changed at will, need to re-examine their thesis. Such religious institutions treat their gay and lesbian members as though they were unruly customers deliberately acting in defiance of old social mores. But in truth, if we have learned anything sociologically speaking these past few decades, it's that the forces of love and attraction act independently of archaic stereotypes insisting that love exists exclusively between a man and woman. And such religious institutions need to acknowledge (indeed embrace) the reality that love flows where it wills regardless of homophobic wishes to the contrary.

Ferguson and Anderson were right in assuming the fundamental stumbling block for authoritarian religions in accepting same-sex attraction lies in the word "choice." The religious and cultural bias against marriage equality can only begin to lessen once it becomes understood that love is so powerful it overwhelms conscious choice. Although many religious conservatives refuse to accept that premise, it remains a necessary condition to knocking down barriers of overt discrimination.

I hope that Ferguson and Anderson do not forego their efforts to educate the public because of a cease and desist notice. We need a widespread campaign organized by LGBTQ community and allies to underscore the random nature of love. TRG

Religious Education

Mary Kroener-Ekstrand

Dear All,

Perhaps you have noticed in our hymnal, on the UUA website, or in some other brochure or publication an explanation of the seven principles and six sources of our Unitarian Universalist faith tradition. This year in Religious Education, we have been focusing on this one:

"Wisdom from the world's religions, which inspires us in our ethical and spiritual life."

In Sunday School each week, our children and youth are learning about stories and traditions from a variety of faith traditions. They are building an understanding of the diversity of religious practice and belief. And they are thinking about where they fit in.

I will be offering an Adult Religious Education program exploring world religions beginning Monday, October 20th. In the fall, we will focus on the Abrahamic faiths – Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. In the spring, we will turn to Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, and Taoism.

Sign ups for this and other Adult Religious Education Programs will be available at church by the time you read this newsletter. Stop by the Welcome Table in Eliot Hall during coffee hour or check the church website at www.slccuu.org for details and registration information.

Our timing in focusing on world religions as a theme couldn't be better. Not only is there an increasing trend of interfaith work here in Salt Lake City in which our church is actively participating, but also, The Parliament of World Religions is scheduled to have their annual meeting here in Salt Lake City one year from now, October 15th-19th, 2015. If we register together, we can qualify for a discounted group rate. We will discuss details in the World Religions Adult Ed program. Feel free to contact me if you are interested in joining the group for the conference but will not be taking the class.

Unitarians have been involved with the Parliament of World Religions since it's founding at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893. In fact, the first called minister of our church Rev. David Utter was involved in the early planning of the Parliament of World Religions with Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones in Chicago before moving west to Salt Lake City in 1891. He went on to host Ecumenical Roundtable in Salt Lake City in May of 1892.

I look forward to working with congregants in building on our historic commitment to interfaith work

In Service,
Mary

Green Sanctuary

*Submitted by Joan M. Gregory, Coordinator,
Environmental Ministry*

Walking our talk is what Green Sanctuary is all about. According to the UUA website: "The Green Sanctuary program provides a path for congregational study, reflection, and action in response to environmentally related issues." Green Sanctuary is based on a framework of four focus areas: Environmental Justice, Worship and Celebration, Religious Education, and Sustainable Living. These are the building blocks of the Green Sanctuary program. Back in 2006, our congregation voted to seek UUA accreditation as a Green Sanctuary and in many ways this is work that we are already doing. But, in other ways, there is much more work for us to do. Over the course of this church year, Environmental Ministry will be delving back into the Green Sanctuary Program, assessing where we are and what we still need to do to complete our Green Sanctuary application. Would you like to help? Read more about the Green Sanctuary program here: <http://www.uua.org/environment/sanctuary/index.shtml> and then contact Joan Gregory, at green@slcuu.org to find out how you can get involved.

It's Beginning to Look, Sound, and Feel Like a Movement

*Submitted by Joan M. Gregory, Coordinator,
Environmental Ministry*

400,000 people marched in the streets of New York City on Sunday, September 21, 2014. 50,000 students from 400 campuses were among those who marched, many of them working on divestment of their college/university endowments from the fossil fuel industry. 3,000 flooded Wall Street the next day demanding not just words but action from our leaders at the UN Climate Summit. Divestment of $50 Billion in endowment funds from the fossil fuel industry has now been pledged by over 180 foundations, universities, faith-based communities (including the Unitarian Universalist Association) and by over 655 wealthy individuals. Even the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, built from wealth generated in the Standard Oil Company, has pledged "to divest first from coal and tar sands by the end of this year, with more to come thereafter." Days before the UN Climate Summit, "more than 340 global institutional investors representing over $24 trillion in assets called on government leaders to provide stable, reliable and economically meaningful carbon pricing that helps redirect investment commensurate with the scale of the climate change challenge, as well as develop plans to phase out subsidies for fossil fuels." And Archbishop Desmond Tutu called on institutions and people of conscience to divest. He said: "Climate change is the human rights challenge of our time. We can no longer continue feeding our addiction to fossil fuels as if there is no tomorrow, for there will be no tomorrow."

The message is getting clearer every day. We are at the decision point ... the decisions we make now will have vast implications for us and for generations to come. From the California Climate Breakthrough Initiative (CCBI) [<http://www.ccbi.works/>] to #FloodWallStreet, here is what we are hearing people and organizations in the movement saying:

- Put a price on carbon.
- Reduce emissions significantly every year.
- Invest in converting to a clean, efficient, resilient, renewable energy infrastructure.
- Reduce consumption, reduce the demand for fossil fuels.
- The United States must lead.
- Climate justice is the end we seek.

It certainly looks, sounds and feels like a movement! Read more: 350.org [<http://www.350.org>], CCBI [<http://www.ccbi.works/>], GoFossilFree [<http://www.gofossilfree.org>], Rainforest Action Network [<http://www.ran.org>].

2014 Ends Survey Results

-submitted by Erin Johnson, Board of Trustees President

An essential part of the Board's job is to monitor the policies that govern our church, including the church's Ends, our overarching goals. While much of our monitoring requires only interaction with the Minister and Staff, the Board is effective at monitoring Ends only when we listen actively to the congregation. This monitoring process must occur every year because the environment changes, new opportunities arise, congregational composition and mentality shift. Only through continuous monitoring are we reminded of our most important values and therefore able to re-answer the question, "Why does this congregation exist?"

At the end of August we conducted a member and friend survey that will be used as a tool to evaluate how we, as a congregation, are progressing on a year-to-year basis. This year's data will function as our baseline and the same questions will be asked for the next several years (in May from here on out). Each year will also include a few additional questions posed by Tom to evaluate specific attempts at addressing congregational concerns.

The survey asked you to rate your personal experience on 12 statements relating to our three End statements. We had a total of 121 respondents (78.9% Members), with the greatest percentage of responses coming from respondents in the 65 and above age category (48.7%). Results are included to the right. All graphs represent the average score for each question on a 1 to 5 scale (1 = Strongly disagree, 5 = Strongly Agree).

Looking at the 3 Ends statements and results from this survey we have overall positive results. We have no averages falling in the Disagree(2) or Strongly Disagree (1) categories and seven of the twelve score above agree (4). Two of the three lowest average scores related specifically to individual involvement in church activities. These results may change with greater attempts to increase

Fall Highway Cleanup

-submitted by Frank Steffey

Many thanks to the following 14 volunteers who cleared litter from SR-65 on a beautiful October 4th: Carolyn Erickson, Joe DuBray, Jim Coffey, Bob Weirick, Sue Slade, Carol Blackwell, Peter Poulsen, Tom Price, Ann & Ron Mildenhall, Ruth & Bill Ohlsen, and Vickie & Frank Steffey.

The hard-core award is shared by Carolyn Erickson and Peter Poulsen for tackling the toughest section at the overpass. Carol Blackwell walks away with the rookie award, while Joe DuBray and Jim Coffey share the extra mile award for going beyond the call of SR-65.

This could be YOU finding surprising treasures when we do our next cleanup in early May.

survey responses from younger members of the church community, or they may be an indication that the wording of our Among End (The congregants of First Unitarian Church create a supportive, caring, accepting, celebratory community where everyone feels valued) may need to be re-evaluated. Only after several years of the survey and extended conversations with the congregation would any changes to the Ends take place.

Scores are particularly strong for the questions about being comfortable in the building and grounds (a result that Hal was especially pleased to see) and about the church being involved in the community and an advocate for liberal religious values.

To see tables with actual response numbers to each question please visit the extended version of this report on our website at http://www.slcuu.org/files/Fall%202014%20Torch%20article%20Ends%20Survey%20results_extended%20version.pdf

Comments associated with the questions were extremely variable and numerous, and they will be taken into account in our interpretation and use of this survey.

Thank you for taking the time to complete our 2014 Ends survey. We look forward to measuring our progress in years to come.
